Switched-On Tories Do It Again!

Local residents & Conservative candidates are today jointly celebrating an end to the midnight Surrey streetlamp blackout.

Throughout Spelthorne, street lamps will continue to glow happily until morning. The illuminating idea was proposed by Ian Harvey, Tory Leader of Spelthorne Borough Council, assisting the Surrey budget, admittedly, but at cost per resident of considerably less than a halfpenny a year!

This superb Conservative initiative has left opponents reeling. The Spelthorne Opposition Leader posted on social media that Spelthorne was financially overstretched, but revised this subsequently, suggesting this inspired idea is a U-turn – it isn't – and it will only last until the election – it won't – the deal is for five years!

Truth is, this brilliant Tory idea is something the ramshackle opposition never thought of!

A perfect example of borough and county partnership working in harmony, a perfect example of why you should vote Conservative on the 4th May.
